"Mr. Republican"

Speaking

WASHINGTON — Senator Robert A. Taft has been drafted onto the Eisenhower governmental "team" and is rapidly becoming the President's greatest asset in establishing the new administration and getting it over its first big hurdle. This was evident as I visited with Senator Taft in his office on Capitol Hill. What did the senator consider to be the most important message from Washington that I could carry to the American people through the column, the Harding College Monthly Letter, the radio program and the other media of our National Education Program?

"An appeal for patience," he said. Then, with hard-hitting logic, he backed the President on the widely debated question of whether tax cuts or a balanced budget should come first. "The important thing," he said, "is to reduce expenses, and I believe the administration is going about this job with enthusiasm and good faith."

Cutting Under Way

"We can expect to learn any day now what the administration feels the expenditures will have to be for the fiscal year beginning in July," said the senator. "Then we can tell whether the budget will be balanced and whether a tax reduction is feasible." After 29 days in Washington, talking to Treasury Department officials, and key men in the Department of Defense, the Post Office Department, the Agricultural Department, and others I am convinced that the new official family operating the federal government is going to drastically cut expenses.

"Mr. Truman's budget called for the expenditure of $75 billion during the year beginning July, 1953," Senator Taft noted. "Taxes will produce but $70 billion if they are not reduced, so that there is a deficit of $5 billion. Therefore, Mr. Truman's budget will have to be cut $5 billion before we even balance the budget or can justify any reduction in taxes."

Man of Knowledge

The Senator from Ohio, universally respected for his integrity, intellect, and both practical and theoretical knowledge of government, is assuming the role of friend, confidant and advisor to the new President, then man he fought so sharply for the Republican nomination at Chicago last July. It is characteristic of him to cast off personal feelings and work unselfishly for the nation and his party. And Senator Taft thinks that for the nation's good President Eisenhower is right in placing the first emphasis on a balanced budget. In fact he himself advocated such a policy during the campaign and his insistence on it undoubtedly was a factor in the President's decision. There could be no permanent gain toward fiscal soundness in Washington, Senator Taft contends if taxes were cut and yet the national debt mounted as a result of an unbalanced budget.

States Policy

"The Republicans never promised any reduction in taxes in 1953," he reminded me. "After I conferred with General Eisenhower, my statement proposed a balanced budget in 1953 and further reductions to expenditures of $10 billion, to a total of a $65-billion budget in the fiscal year 1953. I stated that I thought a tax reduction could be given to the beginning of 1954 for the ensuing year, a substantial tax reduction of about 12 per cent. This is still my goal, although I hope there might be a still further reduction of expenditures."

It is my opinion that once the Eisenhower team has "learned the ropes" to the various agencies and departments, Senator Taft will be one of the most powerful voices in Washington for whitening the federal government down to proper size. But it will take time, he explains. "I think why he feels an appeal to the taxpayers for patience is so important. 'A year or so from now,'" he said, "the people may expect to see the tangible re-

★ AUTHOR OF "HOW TO STOP WORRYING AND START LIVING" ★

VIRGINIA DAVIS, 1425 Diversey Parkway, Chicago, Illinois, says she has done more worrying on occasions when she had to speak in public than about any other event in her life.

A couple of years ago, this worry developed into fear and the fear grew into a phobia so great that when she had to talk to a group of more than four people she would begin to quake and stutter. Finally this led to such a feeling of insecurity that she developed a severe inferiority complex—both in her social and her workaday life. When her job demanded that she read a twenty minute case study at a public health mental hygiene meeting, she worked herself into such a complete state of nerves that the doctor gave her a sedative to see her through the ordeal.

As she looked around and saw others rise to their feet and speak with ease, she came to the sensible conclusion that this fear was ridiculous. Then she searched for—and found—the cause: In grade school and part of high school she had been an unbearable show-off. She was up in front all the time. The teachers were defenseless against her. Whenever a solo had been wanted—song or speech—she had been on her feet demanding the part. One day without warning adolescent shyness struck her just as she was dashing up to the front of the room. Her knees began to shake and she became painfully self-conscious.

Now looking back and making comparisons, she realized that she would never be as good as she thought she was in her younger days, but neither was she as bad as she thought she was in her inferiority complex days. Then her fears began to dissolve—as soon as she accepted that simple conclusion.

Happenings That Affect the Future of Every Individual — National and International Problems Inseparable From Local Welfare

Quite naturally, most of us think of the tax problem primarily in connection with the federal government. Washington, D. C., collects most of our tax money today. And Washington, D. C., has been the center from which most of the revelations of waste, incompetence and graft have come. On the brighter side, the hopes of tens of millions of people are pinned on the new federal administration's pledged efforts to wring the water out of government financing, to balance the budget, and to eventually reduce taxes.

But the taxpayers will make a serious mistake if they focus their attention on the federal establishment to the exclusion of all else. State and local governments are big tax collectors too—and they are asking for more, not less, money.

U S News and World Report recently dealt with this problem in an admirably written and documented "special report" to its readers. It began on this note: "Don't start celebrating the prospect of a tax cut yet. State and local taxes are going up, not down. License fees, sales taxes, other levies are on the increase. For many, they can wipe out any cut in federal income taxes."

Since 1945, U S News says, the income of local government has nearly doubled—it jumped from $12,300,000,000 in 1946 to $24,400,000,000 in 1952. That is certainly a handsome increase—but spending outran it, going from $11,200,000,000 to $26,000,000,000. Last year, in other words, local government incurred a deficit of $1,500,000,000. Deficits nearly as large have been piled up in other postwar years. And local government is facing demands for tremendous future projects. To take but two examples, some estimates say that $20,000,- 600,000 should be spent on the major highways alone, and $10,000,000,000 on schools.

The result as U S News puts it, is that "tax gatherers in states and cities . . . are all poised to pounce as soon as the federal government relaxes its grip."

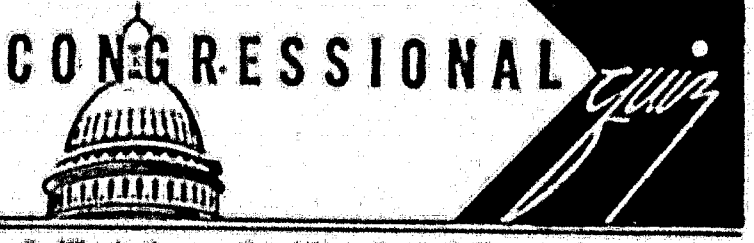

The sources of local government revenues are many and diverse. Today 29 states have individual income taxes. So do 24 cities—where, before World War II, Philadelphia alone had this dubious distinction. Several states have gross-income or gross-receipts taxes on business. Practically all cities, of course, impose license-taxes on businesses, and in 102 of the cities these taxes are based on gross receipts.

Thirty-two states tax retail sales, usually excepting food and medicines. All the states have a gasoline tax which is paid by the motorist. And, finally, there is that old stand-by, the property tax. This is tending to go up too—either directly, through increases in the rate, or indirectly, through higher assessments.

To quote U S News again, "There is a tax, in fact, on almost every move a person makes. Take New York City as an example. The New Yorker pays a property tax, a 3 per cent tax on retail sales, a gross-business-receipts tax, a tax on occupied hotel rooms, an automobile-use tax, a special cigarette tax. . . . The New York situation is by no means unique. Nearly all cities use one or more such levies."

So, even though the U S Treasury takes the biggest bite out of our pocketbooks, the city hall and the county seat and the state capital are important too.

The Maine Agricultural Experiment Station runs soil tests and the Extension Service makes recommendations for liming and fertilizing based on the test results. This service is available to any farmer.

1. Q—Who is the new Republican National Chairman?
A—Leonard W. Hall of New York, a former U.S. Representative, is the new GOP National Chairman. He succeeded C. Wesley Roberts, who resigned March 27. Roberts was elected National Chairman Jan. 17 after Arthur E. Summerfield was nominated for the Postmaster General post he now holds. Summerfield became National Chairman after the GOP nominated Dwight D. Eisenhower in July, 1952. Summerfield's predecessor, Guy C. Gabrielson, had supported Sen. Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) for the Presidential nomination.

2. Q—How many special assistants does President Eisenhower have?
A—The President's immediate staff includes 11 principal assistants, the same number as were under former President Truman. Eisenhower's main assistants are Sherman Adams, Robert C. Butler, Maj. Gen. Wilton D. Parsons, Dr. Gabriel Hauge, Emmet J. Hughes, C. D. Jackson, Rear Adm. Lewis L. Strauss, James C. Hagerly, Bernard Shanley, Thomas E. Stephens and Roger Steffen, according to a White House spokesman.

3. Q—Can a foreign-born person become a Member of the U.S. Congress?
A—Yes, but a person must be a citizen of the U.S. for at least seven years to qualify as a Member of the House and nine years to be eligible for election to the Senate.

4. Q—The Senate seems to be meeting more frequently recently and holding longer sessions. Why?
A—The new Senate usually met three times a week until April 7. Then it began meeting daily as Majority Leader Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) called for a drive to complete action on the controversial "midlands" issue—the topic most debated, on the Senate floor, this year.

5. Q—How many measures have been introduced in Congress this year?
A—There were 6,876 measures of all kinds, public and private, introduced in the 83rd Congress through April 13—1,813 in the Senate and 5,063 in the House. These include Senate and House bills, resolutions, joint resolutions and concurrent resolutions. Only 21 public laws were enacted through April 13.

Lawmakers should be adjusted to cut no less than 16 inches high in order to help crowd out weeds, advises Lewis Russell, Maine Extension Service.

* THE AMERICAN WAY *

Secretary Benson Prays

GEORGE PECK

(EDITOR'S NOTE: George Peck is Chairman of the Board of the National Labor-Management Foundation and Executive Editor of its official publication, PARTNERS.)

One more evidence that the men who are now occupying key positions at Washington are mindful of America's spiritual heritage is the prayer offered by Ezra Taft Benson, Secretary of Agriculture, at the first informal cabinet meeting of President Eisenhower held in New York City on January 12, 1953. On that date, Mr. Benson was the Secretary of Agriculture—Designate and General Eisenhower was the President-Elect.

The prayer was called for, without previous notice, at the beginning of the luncheon and was given spontaneously. Secretary Benson explains that never before has he attempted to write a prayer, but at the urgent request of the press, reconstructed this one as nearly as possible. The prayer is of such beauty that it is passed on to the readers of this column just as Secretary Benson reconstructed it:

"Our Heavenly and Eternal Father, in deep humility and gratitude we approach Thy holy throne in prayer. We thank Thee for this blessed privilege for we realize, in part at least, our great dependence upon Thee.

"We are deeply grateful for this glorious land in which we live. We know it is a land choice above all others—the greatest nation under Heaven. We thank Thee for all of our spiritual and material blessings. We thank Thee for liberty—for our free agency, our way of life, and our free institutions.

"We acknowledge, gratefully, the unselfish service of those who have preceded us, especially the Founding Fathers of this nation. We thank Thee for the glorious Constitution of this land which has been established by noble men who Thou didst raise up unto this very purpose. We praise Thy holy name for the glorious and eternal concepts embodied therein. Help us ever, we pray Thee, to be true and faithful to these great and guiding principles.

"Our Heavenly Father bless richly, we pray Thee, Thy son and servant who has been chosen by the sovereign people of this great nation, to serve as their Chief Executive. Our Father, wilt Thou endow him, and all of us, with a deep spirit of humility and devotion. We know that without Thy divine help we cannot succeed in the great responsibilities which have been placed upon. Sustain us, our Father, through Thy divine power.

"Bless in a special manner Thy servant, our leader, with wisdom, understanding and the inspiration of Thy Spirit to guide him in his heavy and all-important duties. Bless him with unbounded energy, health and strength. And may he always be blessed with vision and a constant spirit of discernment in his leadership.

"Bless those of us whom he has chosen to assist him and to stand at his side. May we ever uphold his hand and be true to him and to the sacred trust imposed in us. Wilt Thou also bless abundantly the Congress and the Judiciary. May there always be a spirit of unity in the three great branches of our Government.

"Heavenly Father, we desire only to do Thy Will. Forgive us our imperfections and weaknesses.

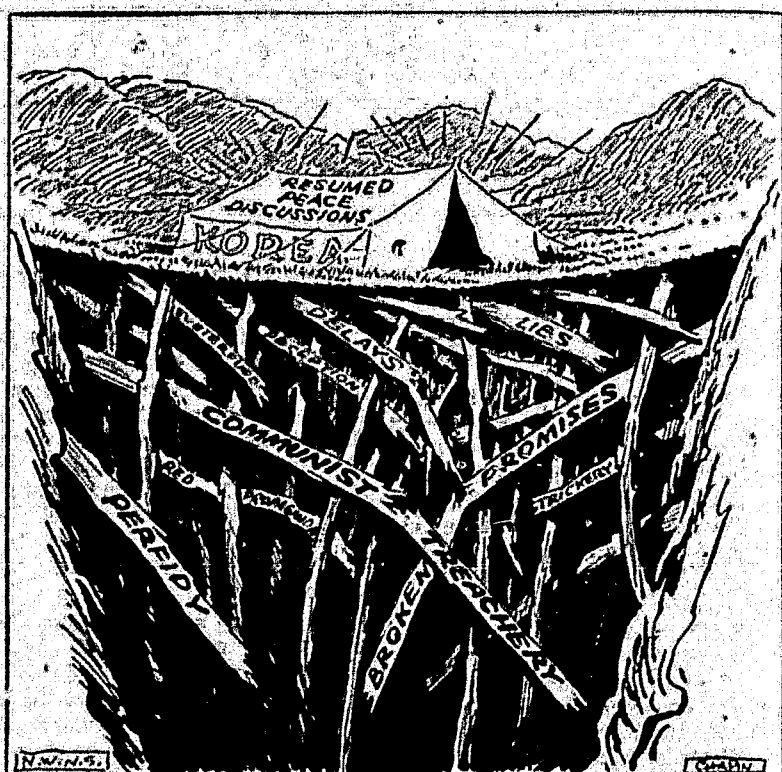

WORTH REPEATING

"This is a businessman's budget. And all America should be proud that it is a businessman's budget because if the nation's business is not run on the same sound basis which must apply to any private enterprise—the every venture of the American people must suffer needlessly and every American must have less than that to which he is entitled."—Boston Record.

"One thing we are sure of that when the Office of Education begins to operate on a new basis, with less money to spend, with fewer fancy projects and fewer employees, not one single school child in America will be hurt. No schools will be closed. In fact, the whole business won't even cause a ripple. But, the taxpayers will get a break, and that's something!" — Bridgeport (Conn.) Post.

"It might be wiser for many of us to change our tactics and instead of kicking about the high cost of food and other living expenses, kick about the high cost of government. Last year the average family had an income of $360. It paid out $109 for direct and indirect taxes. That $110 would have been enough to buy a $21 basket of groceries every week in the year." — Skowhegan (Maine) Reporter.

IT'S AN OLD, OLD BRIDGE

Scanning the NEWS

AMERICANS during the past week listened to the stories of sick and wounded Allied prisoners returned by the Communist in Korea and were angered as they have not been since the days of World War II. Death marches, disease and hunger killed at least 867 Americans and South Koreans in Red captivity, incomplete tabulations reveal.

One soldier told of a 300-mile forced march that began with 700 men and ended with only 289 alive. Other prisoners told of at least three other marches in which 156 Americans and 299 South Koreans died. A Turkish prisoner revealed that 100 Americans died of starvation in his camp alone.

These stories have created an anger in the American people that will be slow to die.

Meanwhile, in Washington Congressmen have demanded a full report on alleged mistreatment of prisoners and demand that Communist prison camps be opened to international inspection.

Also, in Washington last week President Eisenhower warned that America and her Allies must not relax their rearming because of the Russian peace campaign. "Until the condition for genuine peace have been firmly established, it would be foolhardy for us to de-clude ourselves about the dangers confronting us," he said.

"Until we can see genuine evidence of change in long-range (Russian) intentions, there can be no justifications for relaxing our buildup," he added.

This buildup of power which the President says must continue, received a boost and a blow during the week. The boost was in the energy derived therefrom in helping to achieve Thy holy purposes.

"We ascribe unto Thee the praise, the honor and the glory for all we have achieved or may accomplish. Gratefully we dedicate our lives unto Thee and to Thy Service. Guide and direct us in our deliberations today and always and help us to serve with an eye single to Thy glory we humbly pray in the worthy name of Thy Son, Jesus Christ, our Saviour, even so. Amen."

The White House would make no comment on MacArthur's statement. Another Congressman did make this comment: "If MacArthur is wrong, it would mean World War III, which would cost the lives of millions of Americans if it failed."

Guide and direct us as we go forward in our new and heavy responsibilities. Bless us with a spirit of humility. May we ever be united in seeking to know Thy Will and to promote the welfare of the people of this land and of the world.

"We thank Thee for Thy manifold blessings both material and spiritual. For this food of which we are about to partake—a further evidence and reminder of Thy goodness and mercy—we thank Thee. Bless and sanctify it to our nourishment and good. May we use the energy derived therefrom in helping to achieve Thy holy purposes. "We ascribe unto Thee the praise, the honor and the glory for all we have achieved or may accomplish. The Citizen Office

Thursday, May 14
In him was life, and the life was the light of men. (John 1:4)
Read John 1:12-13.

OFTEN one hears the complaint that it is hard to reconcile God, a Being of supreme power and goodness, with the deep suffering of some good person whom we love. However, there is not a word in the New Testament in support of the thesis that by goodness one can escape suffering. The evidence is far the reverse. Christ bore the suffering and sorrow of the world. Suffering has also been the lot of countless martyrs and millions of Christ's faithful followers ever since. Goodness in no sense insulates one from pain, hardship, or suffering.

Christianity gives to men of faith something better than insulation. Christ gives courage to meet suffering fearlessly. Christ teaches us to use suffering constructively—as a means to generate power. To Christians who have learned the way of the cross comes a deep understanding of life. This understanding puts new courage and joy into their hearts. Moreover, a sense of comradeship with the living Christ glorifies everything around us and helps us to give new meaning to the lives of others.

Prayer
O God, help us to use our suffering as a means of having a closer comradeship with Christ. By such comradeship help us to gain new power. Teach us to use that power to make Christ more real to others. In His dear name. Amen.
Thought For The Day
"Ye are partakers of Christ's sufferings."
—Francis B. Sayre, Diplomat (District of Columbia)

Who shall not fear Thee, O Lord, and glorify Thy name? for Thou art holy for all nations shall come and worship before Thee; for Thy judgments are made manifest. —(Revelation XV, 4)

We are living in days when there are men and nations who glorify only their material might and mortal leaders, and when there are in the skies frightening things we do not understand. We face great dangers. But if we ourselves, as people, live in the Lord and have faith and strength in His Word, the forces of evil cannot overcome us.

See you saw it in THE CITIZEN.

MR. AMERICA DOESN'T LIVE HERE ANY MORE

by Bob Nichols

I like the Bethel area. There may be other spots around this country where the United States of America that we were born into many years ago still resembles the land of our forefathers; but I stopped looking for those spots when I found Bethel. At sundown here in the Bethel area, and especially at dawn, I am always reminded of the second stanza of what used to be our National Anthem: "I love thy rocks and rills, thy woods and templed hills."

Mr. America liked the Bethel area too, and to me he seemed so fittingly symbolic of our rocks, rills, woods and templed hills. You see, Mr. America was a great Bald Eagle, the great American Eagle, if you please. For three years I watched him soar majestically up and down the Androscoggin River. I used to wonder just what his huge wing spread might be. I guessed it might be as much as seven feet; but that guess was too conservative. I now know that his wing spread was at least 7 1/2 feet; and I say at least because his great wings were stiffened in death when I measured him. He had been dead probably three or four days when Game Warden Don Bouchard and I found him. He was lying directly under the big elm, one of his favored lookout perches, on the interval land a mile or two this side of Gilead Bridge. So Mr. America doesn't live here any more. Someone shot him.

I saw Mr. America twice this spring while woodchuck hunting. The first occasion offered the best look at him I ever had. He was perched in the same old elm. I was gazing the distant river meadows when the Game Warden, who has uncanny vision, said quietly, "Look at that eagle." There the great bird sat, motionless as marble, not more than a hundred yards away. I turned my glass on him. What a sight, the closest view of him I ever had. He was looking directly at me. I looked squarely into his fierce old yellow eyes; then the jig was up. I do believe his natural vision was fully the equal of mine aided by the eight-power glass, because a second after our eyes met he spread his great wings and glided off. I had been far too nosy to suit His Majesty. After all, I am only a commoner; and while a cat may look at a queen, there is nothing in the book that says a commoner may stare at a king.

The second time I saw Mr. America this spring he let me in on a little secret. I had spied a woodchuck far out on the river meadow, about four hundred yards out. I estimated at this range on a woodchuck target I might as well throw rocks; but taking a steady rest across the hood of the car I shot anyway. I scored a close miss, which of course is as good as a mile, but the woodchuck was startled that he all but turned a somersault, then ran around in a befuddled circle for a moment. Unknown to me, Mr. America had evidently been watching my shot; and I must say he appeared to have a lot more confidence in my shooting than I did, for when I caught sight of him he was sailing down on a bee-line for that woodchuck; and the woodchuck now seeing real trouble headed his way promptly dived into his burrow, and Mr. America planned upward and upward. I have not the slightest doubt that Mr. America has feasted on more than one woodchuck carcass I left in those river meadows. I never like to see anything wasted, so I always lay a shot woodchuck in clear view with his bloodied side up to attract the little foxes; because if a fox has his belly full of woodchuck he probably won't go looking for some farmer's chickens, and especially at that eagle.

Partridges. But until Mr. America tipped me off with his swooping maneuver I never suspected that he too might be sharing in this feast; for woodchuck carcasses always seem to disappear shortly after I "set the table."

I'm going to miss Mr. America. So will his misuses. The ornithologists say the Bald Eagle mates for life. That's too bad for her and the young 'uns; too bad for us too, for a magnificent wild thing has gone from the Bethel area forever.

Only the naturalist John Burroughs fittingly described this great emblem of the United States of America when he wrote: "He draws great lines across the sky; he sees the forests like a carpet beneath him; he sees the hills and valleys as folds and wrinkles in a many colored tapestry; he sees the river as a silver belt connecting remote horizons. We climb mountain peaks to get a glimpse of the spectacle that is hourly spread out beneath him. Dignity, elevation, repose, are his. I would have my thoughts take as wide a sweep. I would be as far removed from the petty cares and turmoils of this noisy and blustering world."

For the peculiar individual who shot Mr. America I offer a suggestion: Many of us here in the Bethel area will run up The Flag on Decoration Day, and again on the Fourth of July. According to his old viewpoint Old Glory should make a very amusing target too, par for the "course" being forty-eight bullseyes on the forty-eight stars in forty-eight shots.

A FEW days ago I took the wife to the races. I had a wonderful time, but more than that—I think I've taught her a lesson.

In the fifth race there was a nag by the name of Third Copy. The odds 45 to 1. That's a natural for a newspaperman. Besides the form said he had four legs.

So I say to her, say I, "That's for me."

"What? At 45 to 1. Why that nag will be running tomorrow. Give me that form sheet."

She yanks it out of my hand and does a quick job of dopping.

"This is it," says she, and puts her finger on one Miss Pettycoat. "It's a natural. Hand over our two dollars."

"But, honey."

"No buts about it," says she and grabs the two bucks and marches off.

While she's gone I slipped around to the $5 win window and put a liver on Third Copy.

That animal named Miss Pettycoat was still on the back stretch when Third Copy hit the wire, a winner by a nose.

"Well," says I, "Where's our horse?"

"I'm sorry, dear," says she. "And your horse paid $98.00 to win. Someday, honey, I'm gonna learn to keep my mouth shut."

"How much will you take to keep that promise?" says I.

She looked real hurt.

"O. K. Forget it. Now let's go collect that $246.50," says I rather smugly.

Damn!!! She hasn't spoken to me for two days.

EASY DOES IT
BY HELEN HALE

BEFORE remodeling old clothing, make certain that all pieces of material to be used are clean and well pressed. Some of these may need laundering, and you'll want to make use of the following tips:

Rip silk and rayon garments and sort out all the usable pieces. Wash pieces by hand in lukewarm suds and rinse in clear water. Squeeze moisture out gently and hang to dry. Avoid soaking the dark or multi-colored fabrics.

To quicken drying as well as to prevent spotting on silks and rayons, spread material on a piece of Turkish toweling, roll and unroll. Most light weight pieces will be ready to press with a warm iron after this treatment.

White fabrics or laces or embroideries which have become yellowed should be treated with an ordinary household bleach, thorough rinsing and sun-drying.

RECIPE OF THE WEEK

Tasty Broiled Sandwiches (Makes 4)

4 slices bread
2 tablespoons mayonnaise
2 tablespoons chopped onion
4 slices American cheese
1 medium sized tomato
4 slices crisp, cooked bacon

Spread bread with mayonnaise. Place chopped onion and slices of cheese over the mayonnaise. Cut tomato into 8 thin slices and place two slices over each sandwich. Place sandwiches under broiler for about 5 minutes to let cheese melt. Top each sandwich with a strip of bacon and serve immediately.

They'll then be as good as new for your remodeling job.

If fabrics have lost their original stiffness, and you want to re-use them, wash and rinse thoroughly. Now give them a gum arabic rinse which is made by adding gum arabic to water. Amounts of gum arabic can be adjusted to the amount of stiffness required.

Sheer bits of lace or trimming can be washed in a pint jar by shaking. Use this method for rinsing delicate bits of fabric, too, to prevent sagging.

When woolen materials need to be washed before remodeling, wash in barely lukewarm water. Squeeze the suds gently in and out of the material. Excessive agitation will cause shrinkage.

The total oil energy used in farming is about 750 million horsepower, which is more than that used by all other American industries.

Coffee grown in the United States would cost $6 a pound at a minimum, according to a recent study.

The 3 1/2 millions tons of lignite produced in this country in 1951 was the highest mark in history.

By LYN CONNELLY

THE question of why hit tunes have such a short period of popularity plagued even Thomas Edison . . . He believed it had to do with the mechanism of the inner ear . . . Located there, stated Edison, are the so-called "Rods of Corti" . . . approximately 3,000 small stiff rods, massed together like the hairs on a brush . . . Each hair is supposed to be tuned to a definite note in the musical scale . . . When the note is sounded, the hair vibrates, transmitting the sound thru the nerves to the brain . . .

The too constant operation of any group of these hairs undoubtedly leads to irritation . . . possibly to an actual swelling at the base of the hairs . . . It is the theory of many scientists that this may be one of the underlying causes for the rapid way we tire of popular hits.

IDOL CHATTER

Hercie Heldt gives up his local Hollywood TV show to go on the road for a new sponsor . . . Leader will do a national radio broadcast from a different city each week . . . Format, as yet unannounced, will not follow the contest idea which has keyed Heldt programs in the past few years . . . Vera Ellen joins Crosby, Rosemary Clooney in "White Christmas" at Paramount . . . Marie Wilson and Cathy Lewis, "Irma" co-stars, are astrological sisters, having been born (just three days apart) under the sign of Capricorn.

Someone in Hollywood figured it out that it now is well-nigh impossible not to own a TV set . . . It is claimed that six years ago a 19-inch TV set cost $350 or $7.29 a square inch of screen . . . Today's 21-inch set at $199.95 costs only 91 cents a square inch . . . Through last November, there were more than two million less radio sets built than the previous year while in the same period, 330,000 more TV sets were produced than in 1951.

Snow's hurling and a 14 hit attack by his teammates sealed the game. In fashioning his first win of the season, Snow showed no ill effects from the beating accident that hospitalized him last month.

BEAR RIVER GRANGE

Bear River Grange met at their hall at Newry Corner Saturday night May 9 with Worthy Master Ernest Holt in the chair. This was a "combination meeting," combining Mother's Day, Music Week and Civil Defense. A 6:30 supper of baked beans and all the fixings was put on by Sisters Hattie Hutchinson, Lillian Coolidge, Mabel Byers, and Gertrude Bartlett. We had four visitors: one from Sweden, one from Upton and two from Franklin Grange, Bryant Pond.

Our next meeting will be an Educational Program, with Clyde Russell of Augusta as speaker. Local superintendent of schools and teachers will be invited guests.

Sister Byers gave a report on the condition of the water. It was voted to have a $200 supper, June 2, when we entertain Oxford County Pomona. It was voted to have the men put on the food for our next regular meeting, May 23, Royal Hodsdon, as chairman.

A silver march was carried out. This is for the benefit of the interior decorating fund as is the proceeds of the "Poverty Breakfast," which will be held Sunday morning, May 17, at the hall. All one can eat for 50c.

The "Youth Committee" is going to clean up the glass and bottles etc., left around the hall, "left-overs" from the dances. It was voted to have the paint put onto the roof also the "Thermo-cap" on the chimney. Sister Byers has her project nearly completed which was getting screens, and we found our windows covered by some lovely screens.

The program consisted of numbers pertaining to "Mother's Day" and Music Week. Then the Civilian Defense committee, James Laasler and Frank Bean took over and showed pictures that gave one the horrors but at the same time showed us some of the terrible things our boys have had and are still going through over across. Meeting closed in form at a late hour. Next meeting May 23rd.

Lake Worth, Fla., Herald: "The claim that opening the (reflex) rolls to the public will embarrass recipients of aid, apparently is made more to cover up the chiselers... than to actually protect the deserving poor. It might be added there is no record of embarrassment occurring where the rolls have been opened to the public but there has been considerable improvement in the reduction of funds wantonly spent in the wrong direction."

News of late events is welcomed by the Citizen. For this reason it is important that reports of early happenings be sent promptly. Accounts of week-end events should be in the office by Wednesday morning.
